Ric and his wife Heidi live in Amherstview. They have raised five kids, and now have just one college aged child left in the house. Ric is a graduate of the Systems Analyst program at St. Lawrence College, where he continued on with the college for almost 20 years. Starting as a part-time professor of business and economics, Ric had numerous roles at the College, including sitting on the Board of Governors. His work there culminated in a role as Adaptive Technologist, assessing and training college students with disabilities. In 2015, Ric took on a new challenge with the University Hospitals Kingston Foundation as their Coordinator of Data Management and Prospect Research.

For seven years Ric sat as a member of the Cataraqui Region Conservation Authority, including two as Chair. Currently serving in his 16th year on Loyalist Township Council, and in his 6th year as Deputy-Mayor, Ric has a keen interest in promoting viable source water protection, waste reduction and alternative energy development, and in promoting community engagement for improving democracy
